California Department of Transportation The State Highway Plan Report # # # # The California Department of Transportation (Caltrans) is developing a long-term transportation plan to guide the department and its partners in setting priorities and addressing needs to maintain and improve the state's highway network over the next 25 years. The plan, known as the State Highway Plan (SHP), will be developed through three phases that will provide a framework for identifying potential projects and funding sources as well as an overall vision for the state's highway system. It will also address the challenges and issues facing the state's highway network, such as congestion, safety, aging infrastructure, environmental concerns, climate change, and other issues. The SHP was published in 2012, and is the first statewide plan for transportation in California since the 2001 State Highway Plan. Approval Process A state-wide public hearing process was conducted to solicit comments and concerns related to the SHP, including the technical content and format. A Notice of Technical Hearing was mailed to most affected local jurisdictions and the public. The public hearing took place in fall 2012. Detailed information about the public hearing and the SHP is available in the SHP main report and the companion documents on the Caltrans website. Overview of Plan The State Highway Plan (SHP) was developed to provide a framework for California Department of Transportation (Caltrans) and its partners in addressing transportation issues over the next 25 years. Caltrans is developing the State Highway Plan through three phases that will provide a framework for identifying potential projects and funding sources and an overall vision for the state's highway system.
